Ian Gavin-Brown at Westminster based law firm William Sturges & Co has announced that the firm is to convert into a Limited Liability Partnership (LLP) on Monday, 13th June 2011. Gavin-Brown, says, "Conversion to an LLP will give us greater opportunities to develop our business. LLP status will in no way alter the way in which we do our work or the people that clients deal with and we will continue to strive to give clients an outstanding service".

The LLP form of legal entity was introduced in 2000 and the legislation was designed for partnerships that wish to expand their businesses without individual partners having to put their personal assets at risk as this was considered unfair in modern business conditions.

In recent years William Sturges has developed a reputation for innovation, it is the UK member of the Association of Independent European Lawyers and last year successfully achieved Lexcel accreditation, the Law Society's quality mark for excellence which has been awarded to the 9% of legal practices that have demonstrated that they have met practice management standards covering case management, office administration, financial management, risk assessment and good customer care.
